

Cookies

Cookies are small text files placed on to your computer by websites you visit. We use cookies to improve your experience with our website, and to allow us to track general usage of our website, so that we can improve it over time.

When we provide services, we want to make them easy, useful and reliable. Where services are delivered on the internet, this sometimes involves placing small amounts of information on your device, for example, computer or mobile phone. These include small files known as cookies.

They cannot be used to identify you personally.

These pieces of information are used to improve services for you through, for example:

- Enabling a service to recognise your device so you don't have to give the same information several times during one task.

Our use of cookies

Essential Cookies

We use cookies to operate the core functions of our website, so that you may visit and move around it, and use its features. We do not require your consent to use these cookies. More information

Third Party Cookies

We use social media buttons and/or plug-ins on this site that allow you to connect with our social network in various ways. For these to work the various social media sites including: Instagram, Facebook, X and Vimeo will set cookies through our site which may be used to enhance your profile on their platform or contribute to the data they hold for various purposes outlined in their respective privacy policies.

How to control and delete cookies

We do not use cookies to collect personal identifying information about you, however if you wish to restrict or block cookies set by our website, you can do this through your browser settings.

Your "Help" function on your browser should provide you with clear information about how to manage cookies. You can, for example, choose to block all cookies, or block cookies from specific websites.

If you would like to find out more about cookies you can visit a cookie website www.aboutcookies.org, which is run by the international law firm Pinsent Masons. It contains comprehensive information and step by step guidance on how to manage cookies.